"SHE COULDN'T MARRY THREE."

Bess was a little fisher maiden, said to be has full sleeves, and no sash is worn. This is first cousin, to the herotne of the classic ditty. She was the central figure of "She Couldn't Marry Three " perpetrated last night at the Windsor Theatre, and in the midst of poverty she were a plush bedice cut low, and some gauge skirts to dance in. The crudite author of this immortal work, one John J. Kennedy. knows a great deal about fisher maidens, and he has tried to tell all he knew, and much that other people knew in this particular play. Bess is a soubrette, and she is obliged to dance and at apples and wear a baby hat and make a fool of herself, besides indulging in various vulgar actions that the good John rangement of triuming has the greatest at a moment's notice—generally in time for a effect in producing a smart and effective tableau at the close of the act—and everybody likes her, including a very dice young ban bnish, and however pretty the material, yet it light and coloriess it imperatively demands some touches of deep color, which now generally takes the form of ribbon velvet. amuel Carter, of Flatbush, a Unique Character of Old-Time New York... He Tells a Reporter About His Ex. perience with Catarrh for Thirty Years and Hose Drs. McCoy and Wildman Made a New Man of Him,

"Yes, I'm one of the old Howery Boys. I used to run with No. 15 engine and I lived on the Bowery, between Walker and Hester sts., but that was more than a quarter of a century ago.

The specker was Samuel Carter, aged 65, who has lived in Fiatbush, L. I., for the pfat twenty-five years. Everybudy in Fiatbush knows Sam Carter, He's a brother-in-law of Garret Stryker, who keeps the Freepect Park stables there. Mr. Carter lives on Fiatbush awa, near East Headway, He is one of the heirs of the Hopper estate, in the neighbor-hood of 5th st. and Breadway, in this city, which is valued at about three millions of dollars.

SAMUEL CARTER, FLATBUSH, L. I. SAMUEL CANTER, FLATBURE, it is an it has a times," continued Mr. Carter. "I was going to see E. L. Davenport the last time it horned down." Here he switched off on to catarrh and said to the reporter: "I suffered with catarrh for thirty years. I had pains in my head and in my sides and shoulders, and at night when I would wake up my month would be as dry as a provider horn. The muona would lodge back of my palate, and I need to hawk and hand, but I could not set the muons up unless the evening and strutted about like a rooster Mr. Sullivan could make a fortune as a burlesque actor. George W. Barbier was the villain, with big dabs of flour at the side of his head, and what looked like a black crape mustache. He wore the $4.90 suit. Virginia Russell was very funny as "the beautiful Miss Sedgwick." Her arms moved around like a windmill and she seemed to have a pain all the time. The scenery was remarkable, and the mechanical realistic moon could secure an ngagement at Tony Pastor's. It was the nost interesting moon I have ever seen. At the time it was positively square. The clouds were also very nice in their own eccentric way. Carboy's Abbey by moonlight was pretty tart, thank you, and the magnificent plush parlor scene, on which a few yards of terra-cotta plush were pasted on some strips cardboard, quite took away my breath. " She Couldn't Marry Three" will certainly go-to other cities, I trust." ALAN DALE _ OUT OF THE MAIL BAG.
